

SOCIETY

As has happened many times in the past year, Miss Roosevelt is again the center of attraction, this time at fashionable Bar Harbor, where she is staying with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, the latter the daughter of the late James G. Blaine. There was a merry bout in society at this resort all the week, and Miss Roosevelt enjoyed a little of everything which took place.

Yesterday morning she was at the swimming club, the gathering place for all the fashionable people every morning, and later in the day was the guest of honor at a luncheon party, with Mrs. Henry Knowlton, of New York, as hostess. Countess Cassini, her constant chum in Washington, was at the swimming club with her and was among Mrs. Knowlton's other guests at luncheon.

Later in the day Miss Roosevelt left Bar Harbor for Ellsworth, where she will be the guest of Senator and Mrs. Eugene Hale, who gave a dinner in her honor last night.

If Miss Roosevelt is able to keep all the engagements made for her through the social correspondents at various summer resorts, things will still be moving quite lively when the first snow falls, and she will have to keep some of the engagements over until next summer. Mrs. B. H. Warder and her daughters, Mrs. Ward Thoron, and the Misses Warder, will have Miss Roosevelt as their guest at Manchester again this week, and it is constantly announced from Cape May, N. J., that not only Miss Roosevelt, but Mrs. Roosevelt, will visit that resort about August 22.

Then there is another trip to Bar Harbor for Miss Roosevelt, a visit to Newport, an outing in the Adirondacks at the Whitelaw Reids camp, and dozens of other places for which she is said to be destined before frost. Mrs. Roosevelt went direct to Oyster Bay from Washington, and is just now enjoying herself with her children at Sagamore Hill, and hearing the wonderful stories that Theodore and Kermit tell of the St. Louis Exposition.

Mr. Bobroff, of the Russian embassy, who is just retiring from the Diplomatic Corps, and has been succeeded by Gregory Vilenkine, who presented his credentials to the State Department a few days ago, and proceeded to Bar Harbor to join the ambassador, gave a brilliant ball at the Swimming Club at Bar Harbor last night, preceded by a distinguished dinner party, consisting of the Russian ambassador and Countess Cassini, the Austrian ambassador and Baroness Hengelmüller, Mr. Van Swinderen, the Netherlands minister; Mr. Brun, the Danish minister; the secretary of the Swedish legation, and Mrs. Christian Hauge, Mr. and Mrs. Louis von Gaertner, Capt. Joe Wheeler, and Count Camille de Borchgrave d'Altena, of Belgium, and his pretty sweetheart, Miss Ruth Snyder, the niece of Charlemagne Tower, American ambassador to Germany.

Mrs. Mary Scott Townsend, who is spending the summer at Bar Harbor, with her charming daughter, Miss Matilde Townsend, gave a large dinner party at Elsinore, the McMillan cottage, when for the most her guests were the diplomats best known in Washington society.

All social affairs at Newport yesterday which in any way interfered with the lawn fete for the tuberculosis hospital were abandoned, and Newport, which is, of course, a composite of society from New York, Washington, Boston, and other big cities, devoted itself with the same old fervor to doing antics for charity.

Then, just for novelty—and Newport more than any other resort is noted for novelty—some of the swells of society played a cricket match against the butlers employed by the rich.

What with the "White Ball," and the "Calico Ball," luncheons, and dinners, garden parties and yachting parties, Newport has never seen a busier season, though perhaps there have been more novel and lavish entertainments than those given this year.

Nowhere are the diplomats who calve in Washington society in the winter so much in evidence as at Narragansett Pier, where the Counselor of the French embassy and Mme. des Portes de la Fosse, have gained almost as lively a pace as did the sprightly predecessor of M. des Portes de la Fosse.

The first dance of the Cotillon Club of One Hundred, took place at that resort last night at the Little Casino, and was led by a popular Washington society man, William C. Marrow. Prince de Bearn, Viscount de Chambrun, the counselor of the French embassy, and Mme. des Portes de la Fosse, Lieutenant John Edie and a number of other Washington people were present.

Life is ever attractive at the Virginia resorts, and Washington is well represented at a number of the historic places.

Mrs. McKenna, wife of Associate Justice McKenna, of the Supreme Court, while ever attractive in her lovely womanliness and consideration for all who cross her path, is winning new laurels at Greenbrier White Sulphur Springs, where, with the Justice and their daughters, she is spending the summer.

Every afternoon she adds to old Virginia hospitality by pouring tea, and thus gathers around her a delightful circle of women who indulge in conversation. Last week she gave a seven-handed euche in honor of Mrs. George M. Davis, of Louisville, Ky., who is a guest at the Springs. Mrs. Thomas Mareau Chatard was among the Washington women attending.

Pol Le Tellier, attache of the Belgian Legation, has gone to the Warm Springs, Va., where the Belgian minister and Baroness Moncheur are proving such delightful guests.

Miss Kate Deering, long time a belle of Washington, and one of the most picturesque women in society here, is assisting in keeping a lively pace at the Warm Springs. She is a great friend of the Belgian minister and Baroness Moncheur, and is a favorite with all the diplomats.

At Jefferson Park Hotel, a popular place with Washington people, another girl of this city is winning hearts, and Miss Jessica Tabler's rich alto voice holds the porch circle enchanted every evening. One of Miss Tabler's chief charms is her constant willingness to sing for the pleasure of others.

MISS DAISY LEITER.

Miss Daisy Leiter, the youngest member of the family of Mrs. L. Z. Leiter, is considered one of the most accomplished horsewomen in this country, and her equestrian accomplishments are not better known here than in England and other parts of the Old World.

Last year she was the guest of the Hon. Mrs. Asquith, at her shooting box near London, and without returning to this country she went to India, where not only her horsemanship, but her prowess in hunting, mounted upon an elephant, excited great admiration.

Miss Leiter has a string of six horses, and riding and driving are her only diversions at Bar Harbor, where, with her mother and sister, Miss Leiter, she is spending the summer.

The picture of Miss Leiter's horses was taken at their Bar Harbor home, while the photograph of her is one of dozens taken in various parts of Europe, where there was a constant demand for pictures of this beautiful American girl.

Chit-Chat

Various degrees of anguish will rend the hearts of society girls when it is known that their young diplomatic favorite, Andre Bobroff, has been taken at his word in wishing to resign his position in the Diplomatic Corps and has been replaced by Gregory Vilenkine as second secretary of the Russian embassy.

Mr. Vilenkine has presented his credentials to the State Department, and has gone to join the ambassador and his staff at Bar Harbor.

Mr. Bobroff is an accomplished man of the world, has goodly fortune of his own, and has entertained a great deal since coming to Washington. It is said his heart bleeds for Russia in her war, and not for an American helms as was at first supposed.

Representative and Mrs. John A. Sullivan, of Boston, are being congratulated upon the visit from the stork a week ago at their summer home at Winthrop, when a son made his advent. There are already three daughters in Representative

The story of Mr. Carnegie's move at Skibo Castle against guests tipping over the bells in the private rooms which read: "Please do not tip the servants," is a reminder of the pathetic little remark of a young diplomat who was this summer invited to visit one of the millionaires of a fashionable resort for a week.

"Why don't you go?" asked another young diplomat.

"Because," was the frank remark, it costs more in tips to the servants than it does to pay my board and stay here. Then after I have given them my little all, it is so small in comparison with a millionaire visitor's tip, that the servants really look down upon me for my poverty.

Weddings.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Postley, of Hyattsville, Md., have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Marie Ida Postley, to Edwin Dallas Tucker, of this city.

A romance lies behind the announcement, inasmuch as the marriage took place in Alexandria, Va., March 25, and has just been made known to the bride's parents, who, although surprised, took the matter philosophically, and sent out the announcement cards.

Considerable interest attaches to the marriage of Lieut. Homer B. Grant, stationed at Fort Washington, Md., and Miss Florence Helen Paul, which takes place Tuesday evening, August 6, at the home of the bride's parents, at Newton Center, Mass.

The wedding will be a large and fashionable military affair.
